 $\chi^2_{\text{min}} = 10.114$, $\chi^2_{\text{max}} = 10.204$

1. The first step is to identify the key components of the system. This includes understanding the hardware, software, and data involved. The next step is to define the goals and objectives of the project. This will help to determine the scope of the work and the resources required. The third step is to develop a detailed plan of action. This should include a timeline, a budget, and a list of tasks to be completed. The final step is to implement the plan and monitor the progress of the project. This will allow for any necessary adjustments to be made along the way.

1. The first group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the researchers themselves. They want to know if the study was successful in achieving its objectives and if the results are consistent with their expectations. They also want to know if the study was conducted in a rigorous and unbiased manner.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

1. Phylogenetic relationships—The phylogenetic relationships among the 12 species of Phrynosoma were determined using the parsimony method of Farris (1993) as implemented in the computer program PAUP (Phylogenetic Analysis Using Parsimony; version 1.0; Illinois Natural History Survey, Champaign, Illinois). The parsimony method was chosen because of its widespread use in the literature and because it is the only method that has been applied to the genus Phrynosoma. The parsimony method was applied to the 12 species of Phrynosoma using the following settings: heuristic search, 1000 random addition sequences, 1000000 iterations, and 1000000 iterations of tree-shrinking. The results of the parsimony analysis were compared to the results of the maximum likelihood analysis of the same data set using the computer program PHYLIP (Phylogenetic Inference Package; version 3.2; Illinois Natural History Survey, Champaign, Illinois). The maximum likelihood analysis was applied to the 12 species of Phrynosoma using the following settings: heuristic search, 1000 random addition sequences, 1000000 iterations, and 1000000 iterations of tree-shrinking. The results of the maximum likelihood analysis were compared to the results of the parsimony analysis of the same data set using the computer program PHYLIP. The results of the parsimony and maximum likelihood analyses were compared to the results of the parsimony analysis of the same data set using the computer program PHYLIP. The results of the parsimony and maximum likelihood analyses were compared to the results of the parsimony analysis of the same data set using the computer program PHYLIP.
